INTRODUCTION

The Nigerian National Assembly, being the primary arm of government vested with the powers to make laws for the peace, order and good governance of the country, plays an important role in ensuring that security agencies live up to their mandate of securing the country and protecting citizens from threats. This includes exercising their “power of the purse” to provide adequate funding for these agencies and also wielding their oversight power to ensure that funds are used for the appropriate purpose.

The two chambers of the 8th National Assembly after their inauguration, developed and adopted a Legislative Agenda that prioritised legislative initiatives in responding to security challenges across the country. Specifically, its agenda resolved to address the worsening security crisis in the country by enacting policies aimed at protecting citizens, proposing legislation/ amendments on security reforms and ensuring improved exercise of its oversight role in the monitoring of expenditures allocated for national security. The 8th Assembly also planned to thoroughly assess the policy and administrative duties of security agencies and departments; adequately screen persons nominated to head security agencies; and adopt other legislative interventions that could address the pressing security concerns.

To illustrate the extent of implementation of this agenda, PLAC has compiled this compendium of legislative activities and measures taken by the 8th National Assembly comprising bills, motions and resolutions towards improved national security in Nigeria. It covers the period of the commencement of the 8th National Assembly in June 2015 and up until March 2019 – the period of the 2019 General Elections.

While the compendium is not exhaustive, it aims to provide information necessary to evaluate the performance of the security sector committees of the National Assembly as it relates to bills, resolutions and conduct of oversight. Furthermore, the compendium is meant to serve as a legacy document that would be useful to stakeholders wishing to engage the committees or National Assembly on security sector reform. It is also expected to be a useful document for new legislators of the 9th Assembly; particularly, in terms of developing a legislative agenda or action plan on security sector reform that is informed by data and evidence of what has been done and what remains to be accomplished.

This compendium will certainly be a useful guide for the Security Sector Related Committees of the 9th Assembly, as well as civil society groups and others advocating for security sector reform in Nigeria.

							- That for the purpose of future arrest, the SSS must differentiate between cases of persons who offer no threat both in terms of physical violence and capacity for escape and therefore not needing to be subjected to auxiliary measures (including arrest at night) on the one hand, and those persons in respect of whom such measures are justifiable on the other hand in order to minimize the needless apprehension and trauma to which such persons were subjected to; - That the recommended amendments to the NSA Act contained in recommendation (1) and (3) can only be attained by the procedure mandated for the alteration of the 1999 Constitution under section 9(1) and (2). This is on account of the provisions of section 315(5) of the 1999 Constitution, which provides that the NSA Act, amongst others "shall not be altered or repealed except in accordance with the provisions of section 9(2) of this constitution";
